The proposition of the Lexington and Big Sandy road is now before the stockholders of the Louisville and Frankfort and Lexington road. The proposition is to connect these roads, so that the Laxington and Big Sandy road will be practically the continuation of the road from this point to Lexington. The only condition is that the Louisville and Frankfort road shall issue its bonds to the Lexington and Big Sandy road for one hundred thousand dollars, and the Lexington and Frankfort road bonds to the amount of fifty thousand; these bonds not to be delivered until As a testimonial of his independent and fearless the Lexington and Big Sandy road is finished to Mt. Sterling, a distance of thirty-three miles.

As a matter of profit, we should expect the proposition would be accepted promptly and unanimously by the stockholders in the road from this point to Lexington. The road from Lexington to Mt. Sterling, if it went no further, would contribute much more to our road than the interest on way the road from this point to Lexington will cal drama: become one of the great thoroughfares of the country, instead of heing, as it now is, local and isolated. This is, in fast, the only opportunity to To the Republicans of the State of California: convert our road into one of general travel from the South to the East.

Regarding the proposition as merely one involving dellars and cents, we can see nothing se important to the roads to Lexington likely to be offered hereafter. The Lexington and Big Sandy road can get the funds by making the same offer to the Cincinnati and Covington road; hut a connection with Louisville is perhaps better for them and certainly it is vastly better for us.

Some of the stockholders in the Louisville and Frankfort road, who have looked carefully into the for the benefits accruing from the connection proposed. They regard the connection as worth haif their stock in the present road.

We can hardly see what reasonable objection can be made to a preposition so manifestly fair, mont. will more than compensate for the expense; and twice that amount of additional business is certainly a very moderate estimate.

We have no fears that this proposition will be rejected by the stockholders in the Louisville and Frankfort road, if they take the trouble to examine it. The Board of Directors have unanimously recommended it to the favorable consideration of the stockholders, and the able and efficient President of the road has put into the hands of and against Southern oppressors.

Now, when it is borne in mind that Mr. Filleach stockholder a full exposition of the subject. We hope they will give it an impartial examination ; and an enlightened regard to their own future course, and in view of the record here The New Year smiles and frowns like a coquette, interest will insure the result. January 1, 1857. INTRODUCTION. Upon this great and very trits occasion, We soar a flight above the common venture. Devoid of fear from any wing abrasion In which our head might serve as an indenture; And furthermore—we hope it won't amaze one— We honcetly believe that we were sent here To give the world assurance of a talker, and note down rhymes—that all may find—in '

Tie seldom that we mount the steed Perasue To spur our doubtful way to fame and glory; We leave such feats to those stupendous assess Who verse-word plod their weary way to bore ye; But when we do take up the rein, the masees Pronounce our name the greatest one in story-Sublime, immortal, beautiful euphonious In which we think they're not at all erroneous

THE OLD, AND NEW YEAR. The very subject palls! Time out of mind. A host of scribblers, whe quote French and Latin, Have beat their brains against the passing wind, And writ their nothingness on sheets of satin; Or sponted prosy verse (till you were blind With rage), from evening close till matin-And all to tell you how the Old Year died, And how the New was ashered in with pride.

The Old Year died-as old and new years must-And all the world was at the funeral wake: The ghastliest corpse that ever turned to dust Smole the astonished sight. Pause here to make coom for the monrners: Oh, how do nbly curst Are they who live to mourn! The flery lake lias no such pangs as broken hearts endure-From hopeless hope the dead are all secure.

The Old Year died-the mourners came and went,

His epitaph was written with a tear.

His faults and virtues variously were blent With good and Ill, with love, and hope and fear. The Old Year perished—nor the best nor worst Of all the years the world has blest or curst. Oh, what is Time? Another year is dead: The living smile or mourn that life is left.
Oh, what is Time, when every hope has fled From the sad heart, of all but life bereft ? And what is Life, since Time's keen scythe has eleft

Mankind? Saints, sinners, savages, and slaves And where are they who hade the Old Year hail? Who blest our hearts with en unnanal joy-The rose-bnd cherub, and the maiden pale, The blooming bride, the wild, ambitious boy Oh, where that one whose love can never fail-The blessed Mother, free from all alloy? The midnight grave has claimed them-far away

The fairest flowers that ever bloomed or bled?

And what is Earth? A charnel house of graves-

Grim-visaged Death went stalking o'er the land, With pestilential breath and sharpened sey the. Reaping the harvest sown by God's command; Binding up human sheaves, with sorg as blithe As If his harvest-home were near at hand-Regardless though our tortured souls should writhe In speechless anguish. "God of Heaven, O'spare The loved ones left," is now our cry and prayer.

The Old Year died-as we have said and sung, And asten myriad other bards will singhen, like a Phoenix, up the New Year sprung, With all the joy and sorrow life could bring o one so modest, lovely, fair, and young, Born of decay and athes. Now among The New Year dawns-a blessing or a curse

A benison to the pure and meek in heart. O'Connell's Duel:

The death of Major Macnamara, in Ireland, has revived the recollection of some interesting events in the life of the late Daniel O'Cennell. Nearly Mr. O'Connell, in his memorable and fatal duel with Lieut. D'Esterre, at the time one of the representatives of the guild of merchants in the old, exclusive corporation of Dablin. Although the Catholic association, whose organization and gentlemon generally, ministers of the gospel, law operations were so instrumental in forcing the yors, physicians, and others, to interest themselve question of emancipation en the Duke of Welling-ton and Sir Robert Peel, was not called into ex-istence for some years subsequent to 1815, there yet had been numerous meetings of the Catholics fostering mother, has made ample provision; yet held in Dublin, at which Mr. O'Connell was the there are hundreds whose parents do not avail principal as well as the most fercible speaker, and, in one of his addresses that year, he referred to the bigotry exhibited by the corporation towards their Roman Catholic fellow-citizens, winding up by oalling them "the beggarly corporation," a name which stuck until the passing of the Irich corporation reform bill. D'Esterre, who had been a light the corporation of the corporation reform bill. and sent a challenge to O'Connell, and the meet-ing took place on Wednesday, February 1st, 1815 t 4 o'clock r. M., at Bishops Conrt, in the county of Kildare. Previous to the opponents taking their ground, Sir Edward Stanley, who acted as second to Mr. D'Esterre, addressed Major Macna-"Well, sir, when each has discharged his case of pistols, I hope the affair will be considered as terpistols, I hope the shair will be considered as ter-minated, and that we leave the ground." Major Manamara replied: "Sir, you may, of course, take your friend from the ground when you please. You, sir, are the challenger, and may retire from the ground whenever you think proper; but I shall not enter into any such condition as you propose. However, it is probable those may be no occ to discharge the whole case of pistols." And so, indeed, it turned ont; the principals took their ground, both being represented as displaying "the greatest coolness and courage," and, before the lapse of a minute, both shots were heard. Mr. D'Esterre's missed, but Mr. O'Connell's took effect in the third of his appacing talant an inch bein the thigh of his antagonist, about an inch below the hip. After spending the interval in con-siderable ageny, Mr. D'Esterre expired at two o'clock, r. M , on the Friday following; and on the next day Mr. O'Connell received the subjoined letter from Sir Edward Stanley:

ROYAL BARRACKS, 4th February 1815. Sir: Lest your professional avecations should be interrupted by an apprehension of any proceeding being in contemplation, in consequence of the late molancholy event, I have the honer to inform you that there is not the most distant intention of any presecution whatever on the part of the famfriends of the late Mr. D'Esterro. I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

EDWARD STANLEY.

DANIEL O'CONNELL, Esq , Merriam square. To this communication Mr. O'Connell sent the following reply, in which he expressed his regreat the death of his antagonist-a regret which, i is well known to his intimate friends, he often gave utterance to in after life. In justice to his mory, it may also be mentioned that he offered an annuity upon Mr. D'Esterro's wislow which that lady rofused to accept: MERRIAN SQUARE, 5th Feb., 1815. EIE: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday, and I bag of you to accept my sincere thanks for your very polite and considerate attention.

It is to me a mountful consolation to much such generous sentiments from those who native he af-flicted at the late unhappy event. But believe me, my regret at that event is most sector and unaffected; and, if I know my own heart, I can with the strictest truth assert that no person can feel for the lose society has sustained in the death of Mr. D'Esterre with more deep and lasting sor

Allow me again to thank you, sir, for the cour tesy of your letter-a courtosy quite consisten with the gentlemanly demeaner of your entire conduct on this melancholy transaction. I have the honor to be, sir, your most obedient servant, DANIEL O'CONNELL.

SIR EDWARD STANLEY. The result of this duel was most unexpected by Mr. D'Esterre's friends in he corporation. From the fact of his being considered a "first rate shot," it was looked upon as almost a matter of certainty that his rather bulky opposent would not have left the ground in a whole skin; and that he did so, under all the circumstances, whother rightly or not, has been attributed by some to the firmness and decision of his seesad, the late Major Macnamara.

Our opinion is that he will be left to serve out his term, his case having been one of the most flagrant known to the history of the Pension Bureau. The building was well filled, principally with the manufactures of our own city, and the receipts were larger than they were last year, under more disadvantageous circumstances. The expenses, of course, were greater, on account of the removal of the building; but, exclusive of the expendi-tures attendent upon the removal, they were not so great, while there was an increase in the receipts. The community looks upon these expositions now with a more favorable eye than ever before, and reems to appreciate more cor-

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1. All persons connected with the foreign diplomatic corps, in full dress, together with the mem-bers of the Cabinet, paid their respects to the President this morning. At noon the doors of the White Honse were thrown open to the public. and thousands, including prominent statesmen, judges, and army and naval officers, entered—the marine band meanwhile performing. The recep-tion continued two hours. The heads of depart-ments and many others hospitably entertained secular buisness was suspended, and the public offices closed.

The documents recently called for by the Senate are very voluminous, and centain the hereto-fore suppressed letters of Gen. Scott and the Secretary of War, relative to the former's pay as Lientonant General. The correspondence on both sides is particularly caustic and personal. Much atxiety for its perusal is manifested.
